A GOOD START.

The fourth annual fair of the Wyoming Fair Association opened yesterday under peculiarly gratifying circumstances. The first day of a fair, as a rule, is usually a preparatory day, on which the exhibitors give a final touch to their exhibits and everything wears an air of hasty preparation rather than completion. This was more or less true of yesterday's exhibition but it was not entirely true.

While some things remained to be done the general effect was complete and altogether pleasing. This was particularly true of the agricultural exhibits and Prof. Rickett's fine showing in the Mechanics' hall. No one can visit either hall without a better conception of the resources and possibilities of the territory and a wonderfully increased confidence in its future.

The attendance yesterday was the greatest ever known on a first day, and the events are so many and interesting during the remainder of the week that we can reasonably hope for the high water mark in attendance to be reached this year.

The senatorial committee on irrigation which contemplated ending its labors here to-day were prevailed upon by Prof. L. E. Hicks state geologist of Nebraska, to visit Ogalalla, Nebraska, a city of about 1,000 some 177 miles east on the Union Pacific railway. The citizens of Ogalalla sent Wm. H. Mullaney of the News here to represent them. Mrs. Senator Stewart will meet the senator on Thursday evening, having left Washington last night. They will then depart for their home in Nevada. Senator Jones will leave the committee here leaving only Senator Stewart and assistants to take testimony at Ogalalla.

The Irrigation Committee.
Senator James K. Jones, of Arkansas; Senator William M. Stewart, of Nevada; of the United States senate committee on irrigation, Maj. J. K. Powell, chief director of the geological survey, Col. Richard J. Hinton, chief irrigation engineer; State Engineer Nettleton of Colorado, Hon. Eugene Davis, sergeant at arms, C. J. Kappeler and P. C. Warman, stenographers arrived here yesterday.

They were at once taken in charge by Governor Warren, Delegate Carey, Territorial Engineer Mead and the constitutional convention committee on irrigation. A part of the afternoon was spent at the races. In the evening a meeting was held at the capitol.

On that occasion testimony on the subject of irrigation was given by Territorial Engineer Mead, Johnston of Laramie county, Ballamy, Brown and Hoyt of Albany county, Burdick of Carbon; Holden of Uinta, Hopkins of Sweetwater, Burritt of Johnson, Coffeen of Sheridan, Baldwin of Fremont and Richards of Converse. The question had been given a great deal of consideration here, and data was presented in its most compact and explicit form.

The Event Celebrated.

The race for the Cheyenne club cup was celebrated with great eclat at the club last evening. The entertainers were W. H. Force, owner of its winner, Mr. Frank Kemp and Mr. Forest of Clay & Forest. The president of the club Mr. Phil Dater, was present as in old time gala days and acquitted himself with his old time grace and urbanity. He was ably seconded by Mr. Teschemacher, the vice president. The senate committee on irrigation dropped in on the festivities and were royally entertained. The cup for which such a mighty contest was waged was filled with sparkling champagne. Advancing to the committee this speech was made: "Gentlemen, you have your ideas of irrigation of lands but this is an idea of irrigation of men." Each member of the committee thereupon quaffed from the foaming beaker.

It was a great night for the club.

The Convention.

The report of the constitutional convention's committee on suffrage and elections was assigned for consideration at yesterday morning's session. The committee was in favor of universal suffrage regardless of sex. To this Campbell, of Laramie, offered an amendment that a provision in relation to woman's suffrage be submitted to the people with the constitution as a separate proposition to be incorporated with the constitution should the people so decide.

Speeches on the general subject of granting suffrage irrespective of sex were made by Coffeen, of Sheridan, Brown and Hoyt of Albany, and Baxter of Laramie. A rather lively scene was created by the construction placed upon Mr. Coffeen's remarks by Mr. Campbell. The latter was under the impression that Coffeen tried to place him in a false light. Something of a scene was created but Campbell's amendment was voted down 30 to 8. The educational clause will come up for consideration at 9 o'clock this morning.

Browning's Striking Personality.

The society of London offers no more striking or interesting figure than that of Robert Browning. It may safely be alleged that no one meeting him for the first time and not immediately with a glow, would guess his vocation. He might be a diplomatist, a statesman, a discoverer or a man of science. But whatever were his callings, we must feel that it must be essentially practical. Of the disordered appearance, the unconventional demeanor, the rapt and mystic air, which we assume to be characteristic of the poet, he has absolutely none. And his conversation corresponds to his appearance. It abounds in vigor, in fire, in vivacity. It is always genuinely interesting, and often strikingly eloquent. Yet all the time it is entirely free from mystery, vagueness or technical jargon. It is the crisp, emphatic and powerful discourse of a man of the world, who is comparably better informed than the mass of his contemporaries.

Mr. Browning is the readiest, the blithest and the most forcible of talkers. Like the monsignor in "Lothair," he can "sparkle with anecdote, and blaze with repartee," and when he deals in criticism the edge of his sword is mercilessly whetted against pretension and vanity. The inflection of the voice, the flash of the eye, the pose of the head, the action of the hand, all lend their special emphasis to the condemnation. "I like religion to be treated seriously," he exclaimed with reference to a recent novel of great renown, "and I don't want to know what this curate or that curate thought about it. No, I don't." Surely the secret thoughts of many hearts found utterance in that emphatic cry.

When an unduly fervent admirer had buttonholed him throughout a long evening, playing him with questions about what he meant by this line, or whom he intended by that character, there was exquisite grace as well as just rebuke in the stress on the words, "But I am monopolizing you," with which the master at last extricated himself from the grasp of the disciple.—New Review.

Driving Reminiscences.

A talkative driver is almost invariably a bad one. He may be all there over a difficult bit of a road, or determined enough with a restive horse, but in a long drive is almost certain to become careless, and the result is frequently broken knees. Accidents seem generally to happen in unlikely spots. I have been in a good many and never saw a horse fall on a steep hill, and only once a collision, and that a slight one, occur at a dangerous corner. A gentle slope down which a horse trots with almost a slack rein, is generally the place where he falls.

Horses are very clever at avoiding collisions on dark nights, and their sight is, I fancy, much keener than men's. More than once have I, when unexpectedly benighted, been indebted to my pony's quickness for my safe arrival. One day the train I had been to meet was very late; the evening was dull and heavy clouds were gathering in the westward, and we were still two miles from home when twilight had disappeared completely. There was one very bad piece of road before us, a narrow place overhung by trees, with a steep bank on one side and a narrow but rather deep stream on the other. The darkness was intense under the trees. Suddenly my cob, which was going very freely, swerved to one side, drew the cart close to the bank on the left, and stood still. I then heard the rattle of a wagon and shouted. A voice answered and an empty wagon with two horses came past at full trot, so close that I thought we must have been smugled.—Chambers' Journal.

PIONEER of LOW PRICES.

We are surely raising a racket with the old high priced moguls and exposing their enormous profits by selling precisely the same grade of goods as they keep at from 50 to 75 per cent below their Long Breath prices. The old story of "Removal Sales," "Special Sales," on certain goods, and "Lottery Drawings," are too thin for the progressive CASH BUYER.
