GEN. HARRISON ALLEN is being prominently mentioned as the Republican candidate for Govenor. He is in every way qualified for chief executive of the new state and what is more, he is a staunch republicanno mugwumpery about Allen-a soldier, a statesman, a man who would till the office with credit to his party and satisfaction to the people. Then there is Ex-Govenor Pierce, whose record as Govenor of the territory is as bright as the evening star. He is good Gubernatorial timber and popular with the people, and Major Edwards, the versatile editor of the Fargo Argus, could fill the executive chair plum full and hold it down as solid as any other man. There are a half dozen others who might be mentioned among the possibilities, so that there will be no lack of good men to select from and the Republicans are sure to head their ticket with a candidate who will win in the contest.
