DEMOCRATS in Boise City have lost their grip in municipal affairs. Boise Democrats want a leader, a bold and fearless leader.

THE oration of Hon. J. W. Reid, at Boise, July 4th, was by concurrent testimony, the finest ever delivered on Independence day in the city.

THERE is some talk of a Bingham county man being appointed supreme judge. It is December weather when Bingham fails to get her share.

CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION.

For months past every patriot of Idaho has been looking to the movements made for Statehood. All have been anxious for the selection of a good body of representative men. The selection has been made and that body is now in session. Now, every argus eye will watch the proceedings. The convention is assembled down their vests before he says amen. in the Representative hall in the Capitol building. The Territorial officials have had the hall tastily decorated with legends, evergreens, starry streamers and stars and bars. The to the members and officers of the bravely, and give a helping hand to never so patriotically decorated before. Vanity Fair never gave such a represented at the reporter's desk. never so patriotically decorated bedisplay of patriotism in a single booth. Contrary to expectations and convention.

THE IDAHO NEWS, repeated declarations of non-partisan ship, the Republicans have captured the organization and the convention has been organized upon a strictly party line. The Democrats were given around Boise City say they are will- a vice-president it is true, but who ever heard of this office for a conven tion? It might have as well given a store keeper for the frozen wares of Alaska; they were also given a page and a postmaster. This is a partisan move with a hurrah and with a big H at that. THE NEWS favors Statehood for Statehood, but if for political gains to either party at the sacrifice of the people's interests it must be counted out. It has never occured to us that a constitution

Dudes Who Wear Bracelets.

The toilet of the really elegant young man is not complete now with out one rather heavy gold or silver bangle worn on the left arm, and usually concealed beneath the cuff, though occasionally an esthetic aposcould be of a partisan nature and we tle of the beautiful in masculine garb cannot understand why a convention may be seen with the bracelet gleamshould be organized on a partisan ing in full view on his delicate, blueveined wrist. A touching spectacle greeted the occupants of a Broadway car on one of the recent hot days when people had scarcely strength enough to bear up under its devitaliz ing effects. A stout, middle-aged country woman entered the car in a comfortable and capacious sateen gown, brilliant coloring and startling the election held for the ratification cut out is in the hands of committees in design, and closely following her of the constitution. None until after and these committees cannot report was a fragile, willowy, Elafne-like this week. Wednesday morning Mrs. individual created in the semblance of a man and dressed in a costume as correct as axiom and as elegant as it was faultless. There were no winged insects fluttering in his vicinity They formed a hallow square about him at a respectful distance and knelt down and softly prayed. His cloth ing was of the most delicate pale gray serge, his linen as immaculate as an angel's vesture, his tie so fraught with tenderness that it brought tears to one's eyes, and on the left wrist close against the delicate, helpless hand, so white and weak, like a sick baby's, there glittered a wire of gold, capped at either end with a small gold ball. The stout motherly woman had compassion on him, because she evidently thought him ill, and drew her voluminous skirts close about her to make room for him to be seated, but he shook his head in a weary way and hung up on a strap where every woman could see the bracelet and looked like a wilted lily on a broken stem.

Another dudish individual about town wears a heavy silver braid in full view below his cuff. The latest Gliddon of Shoshone fills a whole caprice of lovers is to have one's best chair. He is the avoirdupois man of girl lock a bangle on his wrist, and girl lock a bangle on his wrist, and keep the key where a woman always hides her treasures.
