FOREIGN SECRETARY

I took a call from John Sawers in Rome and updated him on today's events. I told him on guarded terms of the conversation with Reynolds and that - subject to confirmation - the Anglo-Irish Summit would go ahead on Friday.

John said that the Foreign Secretary had some time ago agreed with Paddy Mayhew that both would go to Dublin for the Summit. He would continue to plan on that basis, but would take a steer from the Prime Minister if it was felt it would be better if he didn't go. I leave it to you to sort out the delegation.

Surely he should come — and work in Dick Spring.
