A burning gunny-sack, saturated with coal-oil, was found in a rear ouilding, about 11 o'clock, fortunately in time for extinguishment. The cross-arms of the telephone poles afford a convenient resting place for a rope, in case any fire-bugs are caught.

Another alarm of fire was sounded at 4:30 this afternoon. It was occasioned by a burning mattress in the lodging apartment of the steamer Fleetwood on Long Bridge. It is quite probable that somebody had occupied the berth and dropped a lighted cigar in the bed-clothes. This seems to be a reasonable solution of what would otherwise be a mystery.
